SECTION 1: ANTI-RACISM
Anti-Racism

English and Social Studies Curriculum Guide
for the Sisters of Mercy Critical Concerns

Definition
Racism is individual prejudice plus the misuse of power by systems or institutions. An individual can be guilty of racist actions due to their prejudice, but the real evil of racism rests in its power to infect systems and institutions for generations, for example, in housing patterns in the U.S. and access to education.

Characteristics
- Racism is a form of violence against another and involves attitudes, words, and actions that exclude and condemn based on race.
- Racism is not only found among individuals; it is a systemic evil that requires system-wide solutions.
- Implicit bias refers to the attitudes or stereotypes that affect our understanding, actions, and decisions in an unconscious manner. These biases, which encompass both favorable and unfavorable assessments, are activated involuntarily and without an individual’s awareness or intentional control. (OSU Kirwan Institute for the Study of Race and Ethnicity)
- The implicit associations we harbor in our subconscious cause us to have feelings and attitudes about other people based on characteristics such as race, ethnicity, age, and appearance. These associations develop over the course of a lifetime beginning at a very early age through exposure to direct and indirect messages. In addition to early life experiences, the media and news programming are often-cited origins of implicit associations. (OSU Kirwan Institute for the Study of Race and Ethnicity)
- The Sisters of Mercy believe racism is an evil affecting everyone. They work to mobilize people in recognizing and dismantling institutional racism in order to become an anti-racist multicultural community. They advocate for upholding the voting rights of marginalized Americans and for a fair criminal justice system, and point out racism wherever it exists.

Essential Questions

- What are the origins of racism and how can it be seen throughout history?
- How can racism be seen in the world today?
- What is “implicit bias” and what are some examples in daily life?

SECTION 2: EARTH
Earth

English and Social Studies Curriculum Guide
for the Sisters of Mercy Critical Concerns

Definition
In discussing the environment, Pope Francis has stated that “the earth, our home, is beginning to look more and more like an immense pile of filth.” Care for the earth is one of the primary critical concerns for society today and requires practices and policies designed to protect all creation from unnecessary destruction including respecting the earth’s ecosystems, combating climate change, advocating against unnecessary fracking, drilling, or mining, improving access to potable water, and encouraging sustainable lifestyles.

Characteristics
● Failure to care for the earth is a form of violence against God’s creation and shirks our obligation to be good stewards of the earth.
● Care for the earth is rooted in a belief in the sanctity and connectedness of all life.
● The Sisters of Mercy believe in the need to work toward the sustainability of life and support movements and legislation that secure the fundamental right to water for everyone and that address climate change. They seek to examine behaviors and policies and to adopt more environmentally sustainable practices. They advocate against hydrofracking; against mining that impacts indigenous and impoverished communities; for regulations that protect land, air and water; and for national and international agreements that mitigate climate change and ensure support for those most vulnerable to its effects.

Essential Questions
● What is the science of climate change?
● How is climate change related to global inequality?
● Can capitalism be reconciled with the effects of climate change?
• How is climate change connected to food production and consumption?
• Beyond “reduce, reuse, and recycle,” what can individuals do to support and care for the earth?
• Can technology change essential human nature?

SECTION 3: IMMIGRATION
Immigration

English and Social Studies Curriculum Guide for the Sisters of Mercy Critical Concerns

Definition
On the current immigration crisis, Pope Francis has stated that “those who build walls, and not bridges, are not Christian.” The heart of Christianity calls for “welcoming the stranger.” Amidst the growing movement of migrants and refugees fleeing violence, climate change, and war, Christians are called to protect migrant families, lobby for just immigration policies, respect the inherent dignity and rights of migrants, and address the root causes of migration in the world today.

Characteristics
● The Sisters of Mercy believe that government policies or individual actions that do not welcome immigrants are a form of violence.
● Other critical concerns, like care for the earth, racism, and nonviolence, have a direct connections to the issue of immigration.
● The Sisters of Mercy reverence the dignity of each person and believe everyone has the right to a decent home, livelihood, education, and healthcare. In the United States we work for just and humane immigration laws, a reduction in deportations that tear families apart, and an end to the detention bed quota. We look at the root causes of immigration, including U.S. policies that contribute to the economic and social conditions that push people to flee their countries, and the global impact of migration through our reality as an international community of women religious.

Essential Questions
● What are the similarities and differences between these terms: migrants, immigrants, emigrants, refugees, and asylum-seekers?
● What are some of the root causes of immigration?
● How should the United States balance the need to defend its borders and the need to “welcome the stranger?”
● What can individuals do in support of immigrants and immigration policies that reflects Mercy priorities?
● How is climate change related to migration?
● What strategies are used to inflame anti-immigrant sentiment?

SECTION 4: NONVIOLENCE
Nonviolence

English and Social Studies Curriculum Guide
for the Sisters of Mercy Critical Concerns

Definition
Nonviolence is the use of peaceful means, whether individual or national, to resolve conflict and bring about political or social justice. In a world of increased gun violence, war, genocide, suicide, and environmental destruction, violence is at the root of all the other critical concerns. Nonviolent solutions are desperately needed during these uncertain times.

Characteristics
- To be nonviolent is not to be inactive. Nonviolence requires positive action to resist oppression and make the world more just.
- Nonviolence is a climate of equality and respect; the quality of being able to see one’s own vulnerability and to recognize it in others. Nonviolence is empathy not apathy, questioning not accusing, receptivity not rigidity, reason not inflammatory speech, and community not tribalism.
- Nonviolence is a commitment to the human rights of all people.
- Violence can be perpetrated physically, emotionally, and mentally and is intended by the perpetrator to exert control over individuals, families, communities, and commercial and government entities. Advocates of nonviolence seek to understand and engage rather than dominate.
- At the national level, the Sisters of Mercy are committed to nuclear disarmament, arms reduction, using dialogue over armed conflict, reducing domestic violence and abuse of women and children, stopping human trafficking and reducing violence in our communities; common sense gun violence prevention legislation, an end to the death penalty, an end to the U.S. military presence in Afghanistan, and dialogue with Syria and Iran.

- What are the origins of violence?
● What are examples of nonviolent movements throughout history and were they effective or ineffective?
● Is there a connection between race and police violence? Why or why not?

SECTION 5: WOMEN
Women

English and Social Studies Curriculum Guide
for the Sisters of Mercy Critical Concerns

Definition
While representing nearly 50% of the world’s population, women today still lack equal representation within political and economic circles. In the world today, the rights of women throughout the developing world is a critical concern. Support for women’s issues involves action and advocacy for policies that support equality for women, especially in the areas of education, healthcare, employment, and childcare. These causes should be paired with a renewed feminist movement that understands and reforms gender stereotypes.

Characteristics
● Failure to treat women as equal to men in word or deed is a form of violence.
● This violence can be physical, emotional, psychological, or sexual and has numerous consequences.
● The Sisters of Mercy believe that women’s education, health and spirituality need special attention. They continue this mission in their schools, colleges, healthcare institutions and spirituality centers. They advocate for equal pay, for services for domestic violence victims, economic justice, and for the rights of girls and women in especially repressive societies.

Essential Questions
● What is “feminism?”
● What are the values of “mainstream’ feminism today? Are they different from the values of “radical” feminism?
● How are women treated in politics and the workplace?
● What are the causes and effects of the #MeToo movement?
● What issues are women facing in the developing world?
What are the cultural narratives involving gender roles and how do they contribute to discrimination against women? How do cultural narratives about gender limit men in their choices?

What are the implications of gender stereotypes combined with racial stereotypes to men and women of color?

What can individuals do in support of women's issues that reflects Mercy priorities listed in “characteristics” above?
